OCCIDENTAL HOTEL, INDIAN APOLIS, ? Aroust Ith, ISSG

DEAR INTERIOR -Although correspond ence is no little hore in the bottent of the dog days, I want to write what I may call my "closing letter," for the present, at least, in this familiar apot

For as touching the circummarigation of the planet, our journey may be said to have begun and ended here; seeing we traveled sun-set, was very impressive steadily east from this point, till we landed from the west at the same spot day before yeaterday. All to the praise of the dear LOED, whose guiding hard of genilest LOVE led us all the way, and luought us hack.

An for the metropolis of the Hoosier State, it looks as it did four years ago, tho' greatly enlarged and heautified in the subcompleted, was just rising ab ve ground when we left.

He has heen gone two years and we missed his portly form and cheery face not a little un arrival. The strangers who run it now are doing it we'll and I will say to pracing that It is one of the heat $2 a day hutels I ever stopped at

Friends in short have called to see as, and the ter in new on all hands that the trouble with malice aforethought. We have "work and labor o' love" of four years ago is still bearing precious fruits in so many has and Citting is one of them. When hearts and lives, filled us with a great joy. our men catch a greaser over on our side I have an lavitation to p each in Christ's they make quick work of him and nothing Church-Epiecepil to-merrow morning, is said about it. to bia pleasant retreat, as to cancel his kind invitation, and the Lexington meeting is not indefinitely protracted, we hope to make Deipping Springs by about the middie of September

This Lexington invitation from the new ager of Woodland Park came to us in San Francisco soon after Mr. Slaughter's proposal, as a very pleasant surprise, and esecied to settle the vexed question of where we should begin work in our native State, an opportunity, that we gladly accepted it. I hope it will soon approve itself on all hands as a G.d appointed thing. At any rate, I am deciding, with precent light, just the level hest I can. If I am blundering, the head and not the heart is at fault.

Let us bring up our ramblinge, to date, before closing this "foreign correspondence." I don't mean that I expect this to be my last I ther to the INTERIOR. I hope our plece inticlations as writer and reader may not be the same need for regular communicall now, now that the daily newspapers will obtain a certificate of the fact that he is a togus antest to give perfect satisfaction, or morey supply all information wert'ry of mention. ea we so from place to place. But wherever I c n get in a letter that I think will prove of general or particular interest to your readers, you may count on the, good Wa'ton, to do what I can.

Well, we left San Francisco Monday, the 26th of July, after six weeks of blessed service for the Master, and great happiness far ourselves. Our good friends, Dr and Mrs. Charles Fox, were unwearied in their love us to know how their gentle courte-ics, dismont second place and following It the which pever for a moment fligged, from first to last, are appreciated by this Troup . Evangelique.

We also met there a Dr. Spence, an Ea glishman, who took to our gospel and whose courteous kindness won all our hearts in a way never to ha forgotten

Our dear frien i Cari Ciarke, former'y ol Parie, Bourbon county, himself a railroad man, made the way pleasant for us in the matter of ticke!-buying, extra luggage and the hundred little torments of travel that drive the average tourist wild, lu such a atarting point as San Francisco. When I gesture of depracation, "Don't talk that way, Mr Barnes! Il you just knew what a pleasure it is to do this! Why, if It was only a yellow dog train KENTUCKY, I would feel like doing something for him! How much more for you!" A ROYAL ovation was tendered Hon. W C. P. Breckiuridge in the shape of a harbecue and hurgoo at Midway Tuesday, Senstor Beck and others made speeches and letters and telegrams from many distinguished gentlemen were read. Col. Breckinridge himself made a speech an hour and a hall long, notwithstanding the weather, which was as hot as hades. Discussing the administration he said; Mr. Cieveland is a democrat; not exactly our kind of a democrat, but as good a democrat as any man can be who was horn in New York or New Jereey and has never been west of the Aiieganies And he has been doing the hest he could and doing some pretty good work at that. With those States and the South we can aiways carry the country.

Congress can only declare war and as it discussed the Cutting question and failed te take any steps in the matter, it is safe to presume that that body is not particularly anxious to go to war with Mexico or any other contry. The South especially has had enough of war, though here and there those who have never smelled powder are anxious to fight. The Lexington Artillery for instance, which had a picnic at Morehead, has offered its cervices to the Secretary of War, but should hostilities be declared, they will find that fighting Mexicane is not like maintaining an armed neutrality in Rowan.

AND now comes another rumor of war. It will be remembered that China demanded an indemnity of $140,000 for the depredations lufficted upon Chinese at Rock Springs in Wyoming and that Congress refused to grant it. The Chinese government is increasing its armament with great haste and has ordered 200,000 rifles. This is interprated to mean that that govern-

"Oh, yes-that is, if it is specified. A woman over in Paterson the other day showed me among the debrie of her tire a dead canary hird in a blackened cage. She wanted compensation for its toss, but the company would not grant it. It should have been covered by a special policy, as they often are. Parrots are very commonly insured, and a woman not long ago asked me to write in her policy, as she put it, 't'rotection for them goldfish,' pointing to a couple of the little shiners squirming about in a seveninch giota. I told her fire would never kill those animals-the creatures were gasping theu in their narrow quarters.

A Distortion of Natural Shape.

It is well to study the style of our fashionnble sisters nowadays, particularly because we are seeing the last of her shapeliness for years. What do I mean! That from the clinging garments of two springs ago they have already departed into an artificiality of outlines and a distortion of natural shape that has not greatly outraged grace and symmetry, but is bound to do it soon. The bustie has been replaced under the rear draperies, and is growing rapidly to abhorrent proportions. At present it distends the skirts to an extent which, if the wearor's body conformed to its limits, she would be deemed hideously deformed; but it is nothing to what it will be next year .- New York Cor. ### MY FIRST PATIENT.

** * And may I beg you to visit us in your private rather than in your professional capacity? Since my dear wife has been failing thus sadly she has evinced a great dread of medical men, and were she to guess you other than an ordinary guest, I tremble for the consequences! The carriage will meet you at Blackburne station at whatever hour yun name. Yonrs very truly, "ARTHUR CRAWFORD."

This is an extract from a letter that I received on June 10, 1870, and being but a young fellow of 26, I was very much eluted thereby. The great drawback to being what is called a specialist is that the generality of people-for what reason I have never been able to discover-are afrald to employ you until you are well on in years, and consequently this Mrs. Crawford, for whom my services had been enlisted, was my first private patient. My specialty was mailness, and tiring equally of hospital work and of idling in my own rooms, I was heartily thankful for the good luck that had befallen me, In a luto his arms, provious letter Mr. Crawford had given a detailed account of his wife's symptoms, and now all arrangements were completed, and I was due at his Berkshire home on the follow-

When the train stenmed into the little cometer station I found a carriage and pair ready to meetine. Evidently, to judge by the general get-me of the whole tiling, the Crawfords were wealthy felk, and this lmpression was southmed when we reached the house, which was standing in the midst of a lovely park. In true country fushion the hall doors were stunding open and my host met me on the threshold with outstretched

"This is exceedingly kind of you," he sald, genially, "for 1 know you have come at your very earliest convenience. Journey from wn pleasant? Yest That's right. James, ke Mr. Lennox's things to his room. Lunch an the meraing room, hey? Come along, my dear sir, you must be half famished." saying he preceded me down a long corridor, whence I caught distant glimpses of a beauti-tul garden at the back of the house and into a snug little room where huncheon was hid. While I discussed a cold chicken Mr. Crawford when on chatting, and ere I went to my room for a wash and brush up before presenting myself to his wife we were excellent friends. I do not think I ever met a man who so much charmed me at ilrst sight; may, he more than charmed, he enptivated me. He was about 30 and exceedingly handsome, with fair enrly bair and bright blue eyes, He had a fronzed complexion and a hearty laugh, and was altogether a most attractive saciaten of a young Englishman. When I had Brished luncheon his manner changed attra, "gas he began speaking of his young "Doctor, I simply worship her," h went on passionately. When I married her live years ago, she was the blithest, merriest girl in all the shire; and now, to see her like this-why, it breaks my hoartl" and he dropped into a chair and maried his face in his lands.

There was an awkward panse, for i noe hand at consolation, and then I stepped nearer to him, and laid my hand upon his shoulder. "Come, come," I said cheerily, "there is no need to despair like this. We must hope for the best. How does she show her distrust of vau!"

He raised his head to maswer me. "By keeping the boy from me, for one thing. She will hardly let me touch him." "The boy? A son of yours!"

"Our only child," he answered-"a dear little fellow of nearly four; and she betrays a terrible fear whenever I have him with

He shook his head; and then followed a string of various professional questions. Our conversation at an end, I requested to be shown to my room, promising to be in the drawing-room for 5 o'rlock ten, when I should le introduced to Mrs. Crawford.

'As Mr. Leimox, if you please," suggested her husban I as we crossed the hall. "You remember that I asked you to drop the doctor, and ween an ordinary vilitor:"

Of course I agreed; and then he told me he had spoken to her of me as an old college fri aul; and limilly he left me to myself. When I descended to the drawing room I

A girl was stunding by the mantel shelf with her back toward me, and I laid barely time to admire the slight figure and graceful pose before Crawford's volor rang out in hearty cordiality:

"Ah, there you are ut last! Lat me introduce you to my wife. Heatrice, this is Mr.

She had half turned when he began speakeig; but as he said may name, she gave a sudden gasp and confronted me with large tartled eyes. I have seen the eyes of a snared bird and those of a hunted stag, but I have never seen such a look of pitcons fear as dwelt in Lers then. For one moment she seemed que hly as it came and she held out her hand argreeting. As sho did so, an ingly scar on the smooth white wrist caught my eye. It look d to me like an unskillful but intentional out from a kerfe, and while we were exchangia, commonplaces as to my journey, ste, I was wond ring as to whether she had ever attenuated her own life. "I met him in the hall," she explained. "He was just coming in from his walk. No, Arthur, don't take him; he is not at all heavy." This last to her husband, who had savanced with outstretched hands. "Look here, Bertie, darling. Who likes cake!" She sented herself on a low chair, still keeping a jectous arm around the child, and went on talking, this time to me. "Arthur and I quarrel over this small boy." She langhed a little, but it sounded very mirthless, "The last cause of dissension is his health. I think he is growing delicate and wants change, and papa doesn't agree. Does he, my beauty?" The boy laughed as she held him yet more closely to her; and looking at his rosy checks and bright eyes, it seemed to me that there could not be a healthler youngster.

"I am afraid I must take papa's side," I said. "You must not alarm yourself unneces-sarily, dear Mrs. Crawford, for I think-" I stopped abruptly, alarmed by the expression on her face. I was new at my work, be it remembered, but I think that older men than I would have been frightened. Bertle had rebelled against the detaining arm, and stidling to the floor, had run to his father and climbed A line game of romps now ensued, and the nother sat and watched them. Sitting there facing her, 1, too, was watching. In my stu-dent days I had kept a tan e lizard, and by whistling to it had been able to direct its movements at will, and now I was reminded of my whilem pet by watching Beatrice-Crawford's eyes. Every motion of her husband's, as he ran round the room tossing the laughing boy in his arms, appeared to hold a fuselection for her, and her gaze never left him Int once. That once was when she walked swiftly to a further table and possessed herself of a paper kuife, which she handed to me, commerting on its curious make. It was of steel and sharply pointed; and I handed it back again with the remark that it would make a nasty weapon if needed. She took it without glanding at me again; but her hus band had curght her words, and now came ny to us breathless and laughing, with Bertis clinging reand his neck.

"Pou't noll that thing, my darling," he sald tenderly. "I hate to see such an ugiy kuife in your dear little hands."

"Give it to Bertie, mamma," cried the child, stretching out his dimpled hands for the coveted trensure; and his father, with an niunction to be careful, was taking it from er to give to him when, with a muffled cry, she snatched the knife back and dashed it. through the open window into the gamlen be-

Go up to the marary, iear. Mamma will come to you."

Awestruck at hir late possion, the child went gently out of the room, and, his mother following him, I was left alone with Craw ford. It went to my beart to see the pained, drawn look on his face, but the scene had at all events put one thing beyond a doubt-Mrs. Crawford was not merely failing in brain power-she was mad. A couple of days went by and I became fuirly puzzled. All the ordinary verbal ests, when applied to my patient, proved omplete fallures. Her no mory was excelbent, and, indeed, in this respect she was for better than her husband, who was constantly days I was too inexperienced to be not as f a forgetting things. As to her judgment, it struck me as above the average, for she was a widely read woman, and we had a stiff argument one night as to the merits of our favorite authors. She managed her own housekeeping, and capitally sho did is, too; and, in fact-not to exhaust the reader's patience by entering into details-the only visl-

He outcome of her mental aberration was this extreme terror in which she lived, and for which I could find no reason. (I may remark parenthetically that the mad undoubtolly have rules of their own by which they are influenced. Experience thus tenching me that Mrs. Crawford had some reason for this, to us, hexplicable dread-even though it might be but a fear of her own shadow-it became my business to solve this reason.) What battled me most was the fact that while it was Crawford himself who primarily excited this terror, she was undeniably fund of him. Indeed the word "fond" is hurdly suitable, for sho simply adored irin. I never heard him express the slightest wish as to the household arrangements but it was inrantly fulfilled; while every whim-and he was the most whlmsical of men-was impricitly obeyed. In fact, at the end of n week I was precisely in the same state as when I first entered the house. But that my amour propre was piqued, and I felt ungry at my non-success, I should have been paying very enjayable visit. Arthur Crawford made a capital hort, and although, as I have already sald, he was a very whimsleal man, and was subject to unaccountable fits of depression, he and I got on excellently to

The fact that it was a the mosnlight he, and that while the corridor window beasted a lovely view, that of my own room boked into the stables, amply justified my choice of a seat. I had been there for pertrips an hour when I heard the Crawfords balf mad with terror, but the next it tied as talking in their room, which was on a level with my own. Their tones were excited and ager, and fearing that Mrs. Crawford might lashing herself into a fury, and that her husband might be ignorantly increasing it, I stole down to their door and stood listen-

These were the list words that I caught spoken in Mrs. Crawford's usually gentle

In a flash of revelation that nearly blinded me, as I realized the full horror of the situation, I undertood for the first time how matters actually stood. While these thoughts were running through my brain I had noiselessly opened the outer door and now stood in the dressing room peering into the bedroom beyond. The door between the two was standing open, but a heavy curtain hung In the aperture, and, by making a little silt in it by means of my penknife, I was enabled to command a view of the interior. At the further end of the apartment lay Bertie asleep in his cot. Standing before him, clad in a long, white wrapper and with her anburn hair flowing over her shoulders, was the young mother herself, while at some paces from her stood Crawford, still he evening dress, and bulancing in his fingers a long, glittering dagger that I recognized as one that usually hung in the library below. By this time he had dropped his angry tones and was speaking in his accustomed pleasant fashlon. "You know, dear," he was saying, "it really is necessary that we both drink some. Ilulf a glassful of young and innocent blood and we shall both keep young and happy forever."

"Won't my blood do?" asked the girl desperately. She stretched her have arms toward him and forced a smile to her poor quivering lips, "You are much fonder of me, aren't you, dear! I shall do much bet-

He hughed softly. "No, no, my darling; not you. I wouldn't hurt you for all the gold in the Indies." He stopped suddenly, as if struck by his own words, "Gold?" he repeated. "Ah! yes, of course, I must have gold. Where did I put it, now!"

He retreated a few steps, looking aneasily from side to side. "Perhaps you left It in the library. Ring for Janus. Or go to Mr. Lennox, Arthur; he will help you to find it."

He laughed again-a low monotonous laugh, to which my hospital work had let! too well accustomed me, and then he moved nearer her, still bulancing the dagger in his ong nervous tlagers. That terrible knife; If he had only put it down for a moment I could have rushed in and secured it before turning to him, but as mafters were, cruel experience taught mo that the instant he caught sight of me he would rush to the child to carry his dreadful purpose into effect, and that the mother, is all probability, would fall the vietlm. On the other hand, I dared not quif my post to summon assistance and so leave Beatrice entirely at his mercy. glanced round the dressing room, and the window cord caught my eye. It was new and strong. I cut it as high as I could reach and crept back to my hole at the curtain. Crawford was growing rapidly angry.

"tilve me that boy." he cried, nonghly. Get out of the way, Beatrice, and let me have him," and he conglet her by the arm and dragged her from the cot.

"Arthur, Arthur! Lasband, sweethcart." She clasped both arms around his neck and raised imploring cyss to his, but the sight of the thin white face only moved him to greater "Very well," she responded, cheerily. Stand by the mantelpieco and give us plenty of room. Now, then, my baby boy; one, wo and off we go."

My life has shown me histances of selflevotion in identy. I have seen proofs of eady wit and more of indomitable plack but I have never seen them so marvelously combined as on that terrible June night, Instinct taught me what she meant to do. She had persuaded her kusbansi to stand ut the end of the room furthest from the curall that hid her one means of escape, and now she intended to hazard her only chance, tash through it, lock the door on the other side, and then go for help. Backward and forward, round and round, she circled, a weird enough algure in her white draperies The little while feet were bare, and it taxed her utmost strength to hold the heavy bay in her arms: last with a suldime bareism of which I should never have believed her capable, she never once paused for breath. A n iracle alone kept the chall asl ep; but when I saw the poor mother's lips move dumbly between the santches of the gay valse she humming I felt that she was praying God he might not wat a. Norer and marer the curtain she came, but to my Lorror 1 perexived that Crawford was growing measy and advancing slowly in the rear.

"Mrs. Crawford! Quick!" There was not a minute to is: lost. I tore the curtain side, and she rushed toward me, but ere I could fasten the heavy door her line bar' was upon as. With a yell of baffled rage he was tearing after her through the open doorway, and in naother mement would lave reached her with updated kinfe, when the tripped him up, and he fidd headlong to the floor. He was stunned by his fall, and while I fastened his lands and feet by means of the ent window cord his wife went back to the Inner room and rang loudly for assistance. Enable came to hanself Arthur Crawford was safely seemed in my own room. Leaving him there under charge of the men servant; I went back to see Mrs. Crawford. She was lying on the bedroom floor with her nervous tingers still tightly interlaced, and by her side sat her little son, warm and rosy from his broken sleop. He was hissing the paling hips as I came bastily late the room, and now held up a warning finger as I knell beside them.

"Poor maining is fast usleep," he whispered.

'And she is so cold." Sho was not dead. 'The long and frightful mental strain through which she had passed brought on brain fever, and for some days we despaired of her life; but she came through it bravely and ere the summer waned I had the satisfaction of lustalling both mother and son in a senside cottage far enough away from her Berkshire home.

Crawford, poor fellow, only lived a few months, for a dangerous fall in the asylum grounds put a merciful termination to his confinement. During those few months I visited him occasionally, and he always spoke most tenderly of his wife, whom he

Imagined to be dead When he died I went to break the news to his young widow, and while staying in her pretty Devoushire cottage I solved much that had puzzled me. Her terror at my thist introduction to her had been occasioned by the fact that she had at once recognized mons Lennox, the mad doctor. I had been pointed out to her in the park the season before. She dreaded Arthur's incipient madness being known to any one, for she had a blir I t cres of a lunatic asylum in connection with her idolized husband, and hoped that a quiet country life, free from trouble and centradiction, might in time restore him. But had he never broken out before! I asked, for it eemed to me Incomprehensible that so slight a frame should be capable of such courage Once, she said, only once, and then he had been bent on killing himself. In struggling with him for the possession of the knife he accidentally cut her wrist, and so occasioned the ugly sear that disfigured it. As for Bertie's presence on that fatal night, she told me he had always been accustomed to sleep in their room, and as I had refused to second her theory that the child wanted change of air, and so ald in sending him out of the house, she could devise no other means of getting rid of him.

And then I took my leave, and I have never seen Mrs. Crawford from that day to this; but still, in spite of a certain pair of sweet brown eyes which make the sunshino of my home, I am forced to admif that there is no woman en earth for whom I have such a boundless admiration as that unfortunate lady of whom I at one time thought as my first patient.-Chambers' Journal.

THE LAW A POLITICAL SCHOOL. List of Cougressmen Who are Lawyers

A Change Inking Ptace. The law seems to be the preparatory school of political life in this country, though it is not so much so in England. Nearly threefourths of the members of congress have stu lied law, and out of the seventy-six sometors fifty-seven are put down in the directory ns regular practitioners. John Sherman Legan his business life as a lawyer, and Henry B. Payne made his greatest reputation at the bar. The millionaire, Stanford, was a lawyer in Wisconstn, and he would probably never have been the great millionalre that he is had not bis office burned to the ground, and the the driven blut to California, Both Teller and Bowen are lawyers, though they have male their millions in other ways. Nearly all of the southern men have practiced law, and Joe Brown, of tieorgla, got his start before the bar. John A. Logan has tried many a law case, and Dan Voorhoos has still a large practice in criminal cases. Senator Alfison, after he graduated at the Western Reserve college, practiced at the Ashland, D., bar before he went to lowa, and the cutting tongue of Senator Ingalls has carved up many a criminal before the Knusas juries. Book, of Kentucky, Is a lawyer, and both of the Massa lassetts senators have practiced. Onnr D. Conger tried his first law case within fifty males of Cleveland, and both Coclarell and Vest are lawyers. Georga Edamnds is sald to make $50,000 a year by the law, notwithstan ling his position in the senate, and there is hardly a seuntor of note who has not to a listle that the ming in it

It is the same in other branches of political life. The lower house has over 200 members who have been lawyers, and its best men are these who have been oughed in active practice. It is seen the executive departments and the greater preportion of every presidential culonet of the past was made up of lawyers, Broser Dieveland is a lawyer; Arthur, Hayes, Johnson and Lincoln were lawyers, and so were Bu hannu, Perce, Fill more, Martin Van Puren und Andrew Jack son. Thomas defferson was making $5,000 a year at the law when he was married, and Madison and Monroe had cache tudied law before they at teste publics. Looking back over the more prominent statesmen the same fact shows it alf. Daulel Webster carried on With a sulden movement she stopped and his law practice during the whole of his senlifted the sleeping child from the best, talking atorial career. Henry Clay was a strong all the time in an azch, nearly voice, that still | man before a jury, and John C. Calhonn was un illucrate man, but he had the bulk of the law laising sof Tennesses before he liecame very prominent peditically, and Tom Lenton was nise a practitioner in the Tennessee courts before he went to Missouri. The Bayards have been lawyers for generations, Vilas, Garlan I, Lanser and Whitney are lawyers, and En heort has been a judge upon

From the very beginning of our government the law has been the step to political preferment, but it will probably grow less so us the country grows older and more devoted to business. It used to be that the primary requisite for a congressman was the power of stump speaking. But the day of the speaking congressman has passed .-"Carp" in Cleveland Lender.

At Dluner With a Great Man.

The proper number of guests for a dinner party is a dlillcult thing to settle. If they are men, by far the sufer plan is tellar it the number to four or make it more than a dozen. Six diners are too many to keep in one conversation, and it is difficult to make two sets of talkers out of so small a number. If there are a dozen or fifteen, the men naturally pair off or pull their chairs at out into little groups. Never isk a great man to dine with small people. I remember a dire failure in the way f a diener to which I was a party years ago, A college frim I gave the dinner and all ten din rs, with one exception, were classimates. The exception was an eminent man-the young lost's uncls. He came to oblige the bey. He rained the feat. We were appalled by his dignity, his official greatures and his penderons condescension, and we sat and regarded him silently instead of enjoying ourvives. I min afrail that he was very mineic of a prig. too, for his manner was overlearlog in the extreme. Beside, he called no "boy," and what could be more galling to the coll go man than that the halumer over using the estimated from the fact that when he refused artichologic ery solitary one of ne did likewise, though they were a great delicacy to motetn.

As this man a tellon our domer socks a stranger of any prefensions and to it fluence a dimer of cronics. After all, the only perfeet damers are improviped ones, and as for numbers—well, I see a great many gray i had and experiented men of the world during about town just now, and I have observed that the number of diners is always two.-Brooklyn Eligle.
